Library Research Consultations?

Would you like library research advice for a research project or term paper? Would you like to feel more comfortable searching the libraries' electronic databases? If your research query is more involved and cannot be addressed adequately through a brief interaction at the Reference Desk, then a Research Consultation is what you need. Research Consultations are available to faculty members, and graduate and undergraduate students. Some of the Research Consultation services include starting or working on a major library research project, writing a major term paper, beginning a thesis or dissertation, and in-depth assistance in identifying and locating resources useful for your research project.

How to schedule a research consultation:

- Call the Reference Office (407-823-3379), or
- Visit one of the Research Assistance Desks, or
- Submit an online request—<http://library.ucf.edu/Reference/ResearchConsultations>
